The Webcomic Codices are hundreds of webcomics created and collected by fans of webcomics. They were created and collected by fans of webcomics. We are currently looking for a new organizing principle and as such need your help. The Webcomic Codices are a collaborative publishing platform for webcomic fans. Over the past nine years, the Codices have grown from a single early release and have become an important part of the webcomic ecosystem. As the Webcomic Codices have grown, webcomic fans have created other collaborative communities and platforms to share and discuss their work. Often those projects create their own publication forms and formats that compete with the Codices themselves. With a new organizing principle, the Webcomic Codices can be the place for their fans to share their work, build on other people's work and start to shape the way people publish and collect webcomics moving forward.Direct determination of norfloxacin and ciprofloxacin in human plasma by capillary electrophoresis with contactless conductivity detection and matrix solid-phase dispersion combined with capillary electrophoresis. A method for the separation and determination of the antimicrobial agents, norfloxacin and ciprofloxacin in human plasma samples by capillary electrophoresis with contactless conductivity detection (CE-C4D) and matrix solid-phase dispersion combined with capillary electrophoresis (MSP-CE) has been developed. The capillary electrophoresis separation has been carried out on a 50 microm x 50 cm silica capillary with detection at a UV wavelength of 270 nm for norfloxacin and 280 nm for ciprofloxacin. MSP-CE was used for clean-up of biological samples by a dispersive solid phase extraction (MSP) using C18 material. The effects of the concentration of the MSP sorbent and the pH of the sample solution on the extraction efficiency were investigated. The linearity of the CE method was verified for concentrations of norfloxacin and ciprofloxacin in human plasma samples between 1 and 100 microg/ml 3da54e8ca3
