Keygen Main Window offers two tabs which contain the most important utilities. The actual workspace also offers four ways of accessing the functions of the program. New Folders Tab: It opens a new window and displays the default folders from within 'This PC' section. The folders are displayed in alphabetical order. You can add new folders and rearrange the ones already present by clicking on them. Hide Tab: It displays the customizable icons of the folders. The only constraint for the hide tab functions is that you have to add or hide the icons you want to see from the 'This PC' section before the change takes effect. The remove icon will disappear if the folder is deleted by the user. The customization options are extremely flexible to the extent that almost every aspect of 'This PC' can be altered. It is very easy to add, delete, or move the folders as you wish. The explorer can be refreshed after every change. Hence, you are provided with a flexible and efficient utility to customize every facet of Windows 8.1. Important Note: The modification of the default folders will take effect only when you restart the computer. You can restart the computer at any time; don't worry about the downtime. Additional Functions As this is an efficient utility designed for Windows 8.1, it also offers the following additional features: Hide System Folders aa67ecbc25

Posted 22 October 2012 - 07:07 PM you should have posted your problem there in the first place... your problem is that you want to go to the start page from a different desktop, if it is a desktop you have named you can just choose that one and launch the start page from the specific desktop if you have more than 1 desktop then you can go to the start page from the right-click desktop context menu... Ignoring me now, but that was how to do it in my computer (XP) But then you were telling me to go to a specific desktop, which is not what I wanted to do.
