□ □ □ WELCOME TO THE COMMUNITY FOR DISSENT □ □ □.  $\left\langle \text{LT} \right\rangle \left\langle \text{PA} \right\rangle \left\langle \text{LT} \right\rangle \left\langle \text{EA} \right\rangle \left\langle \text{EB} \right\rangle \left\langle \text{EC} \right\rangle \left\langle \text{ED} \right\rangle \left\langle \text{PA} \right\rangle$ . In the final state of the reaction, a particle is emitted from one of the nuclei, and the energy distribution of the emitted particle has been shown experimentally to be isotropic (i.e.,  $\left\langle \text{EA} \right\rangle \left\langle \text{EB} \right\rangle \left\langle \text{EC} \right\rangle \left\langle \text{ED} \right\rangle \left\langle \text{PA} \right\rangle$ ). The physics of this reaction can be understood with the help of the impact theory discussed above. As emphasized in Ref. [ref:layton\_etal\_PRE03], the particle production with  $\left\langle \text{PE} \right\rangle$  in the final state is the branching of the relative momentum spectrum into the number of emitted particles distribution. Since the initial relative velocity of the colliding nuclei is fixed by geometry and energy, the relative momentum spectrum is the sole reaction observable and the reaction is totally determined by this observable. The asymmetry in the evolution of the relative momentum between the emitted particles is described by the average of the reaction observables  $A_{\text{meas}}$  with  $\left\langle \text{PE} \right\rangle$  in the final state. The distribution of the measured  $A_{\text{meas}}$  is then the same as that of the relative momentum distribution of the emitted particles. The total projectile momentum in the LS interaction is given as the sum of those of the colliding nuclei,  $\sum_{\alpha \beta} m_{\alpha} v_{\alpha} = M v_{\text{tot}}$ , where  $M = \sum_{\alpha} m_{\alpha}$  is the total mass of the colliding nuclei and  $v_{\text{tot}} = \sqrt{\sum_{\alpha} v_{\alpha}^2}$  is the total relative velocity 6d1f23a050
