Serum albumin concentration and serum creatinine concentration are good predictors of bleeding in elderly patients. To clarify whether the risk of bleeding is related to serum albumin concentration, we measured the mean values of serum albumin concentration, blood loss, and frequency of platelet transfusions in 23 elderly patients with warfarin-related bleeding and 30 elderly patients without anticoagulation in a stable condition. The mean values of serum albumin concentrations in the former and latter group were 3.3 +/- 0.6 g/dl and 3.8 +/- 0.5 g/dl, respectively. There was no significant difference in blood loss and frequency of platelet transfusion between the two groups. It is suggested that, similar to middle-aged adults, bleeding complications are not influenced by serum albumin concentration in elderly patients receiving warfarin.[Giant gangliocytoma of the duodenum]. Giant gangliocytic tumor of the duodenum is a rare benign neoplasm. The tumor is histopathologically identical to gangliocytoma and a benign ganglioneurocytoma, but is larger than gangliocytoma and composed of a mixture of ganglion cells and Schwann cells. Although the gangliocytoma of the duodenum has a tendency to be localized in the third portion of the duodenum, its surgical removal has been difficult. In this report, we examined a patient with gangliocytoma of the duodenum. A 46-year-old woman was admitted with abdominal discomfort. Upper gastrointestinal radiography and endoscopy revealed a protruding lesion in the third portion of the duodenum. Ultrasound, computed tomography and magnetic resonance imaging showed a tumor of the duodenum, which showed high signal intensity on T2-weighted magnetic resonance images. The tumor was also enhanced with the intravenous administration of gadolinium. On laparotomy, the tumor was found in the duodenum and had adhered to the third portion of the duodenum and partial gastrectomy was carried out. Gross examination of the resected specimen revealed a tumor, 0.5x0.7x1.5 cm in size
